PUBLIC UTILITIES SHOULD BE TAXED SAYS EXPERT

Public Service Commission Best Taxing Authorities Former Nevada Commissioner Tells National Tax Conference

By Evening Herald Leased Wire

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—The question whether public utilities should be assessed for taxation by public service commissioners caused some of the attention of the National Conference on Taxation here today. F. S. Fletcher of Reno, Nevada, a former member of the Nevada state tax commission, watched the development of the public utility, adding in "The marching efficiency may be shown as compared with the previous wasted individual efforts, and said that this division was necessary with its present money profits to which the public had paid little attention.

He dismissed the suggestion that public utilities under strict regulation should not be taxed at all by noting that in such case a part of the public would be benefited at the expense of a larger part now served by private and the rest in taxes would have to be made up by other property on a wholly unfair proposition. The same reasoning he intended would apply to unregulated ownership under which a crowding of rates to a small portion of the community would give them an unfair advantage over the taxpayers generally. "No one is bound to keep the tax on," he said, "but always, the many are interested for the benefit of the few by raising it off."

Assuming then that the public utilities should be taxed, the question arises as to the amount of the tax and whether the valuation should be the same for tax as for rate purposes. No difficulty arises in the former mind in ascertaining a different value for each purpose, as rates are largely based on what is put into the property as investment while taxes are imposed on what is taken out of income. One is an investment value, the other an income market value. Under certain and proper regulation the two would tend to come together as the fixing of rates is the chief factor in the market value of the utility.

He held that as the questions raised were expert analysis of facts and as the same set of facts must be used for both rate and tax purposes, the same expert body of public service commissioners could well determine both issues.

KNEW HIS WIFE'S MAIDEN NAME—REST WAS COMPLETE BLANK

By Evening Herald Leased Wire

San Jose, Calif., Aug. 11.—The police awaited word today from New York in the hope of establishing the identity of an Alpinia victim, thought to be Prof. Cecil F. Lovell, formerly of Columbia university, who disappeared on November 24, 1912, while traveling to Hamilton, Ont.

The unknown man applied to the authorities here ten days ago for assistance in locating his relatives. The only thing he knew was his wife's maiden name, which he said was Lydia F. Widow.

The man's description was said by the police to tally closely with that of the missing college professor and Lovell's relatives were communicated with last night.

EXPLODING WHISKY SAVES A CAMPER FROM FIRE

He Rides Away in His Under-clothes, and Leaves a Mystery for Forest Rangers to Solve.

Report on a fire that was thought to have involved a tragedy has been received by Supervisor James F. Mullin, of the Manzano forest. The supposed tragedy turned out to be a campfire.

The fire was on Mount Sedgewick.
Rangers sighted it at 7 o'clock and by 7:30 they were there on the scene. It was a hot little fire, but they got there in time to prevent it doing much damage.

When they looked over the scene they found near the debris of a campsite fragments of a saddle, boots, stirrups, a suit and a blanket. Only charred bits remained, but they were able to make plain the character of the articles. It was naturally assumed that someone had been caught by the sweep of the flames, possibly after being overcome in sleep by the dense smoke.

Search, however, failed to disclose fragments of a body. The affair was beginning to be regarded as a forest mystery when one of the rangers came across pieces of an exploded whiskey bottle. That furnished the explanation. It was decided that a drunken camper, after taking off his saddle, suit and blanket, leaving his careless, smoky fire to take care of itself.
The flames spread and burned up saddle and clothes, and then came close enough to where the bottle lay to explode it. The noise of the exploding whiskey woke the camper and he jumped on his horse without considering the order of his going and rode off at his uttermost. He was probably a scared hombre when he woke up and forest officers saw he was actually going yet.
